FUND PERFORMANCE

FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

The local bourse started the month low due to concerns over further rate hikes, slowing global growth and policy changes by the newly-elected government. However, it recovered towards the last few trading days and ended the month in positive territory due to window-dressing activities. Market sentiments may have also improved after Prime Minister Dato' Seri Anwar bin Ibrahim won a motion of confidence in Parliament on 19 December 2022. Foreign investors remained net sellers while local institutional investors were the largest net buyer for the month. The top three best-performing sectors in December 2022 were plantation, transport and healthcare while the top three worst-performing sectors were property, construction and telecom.

In China, the Hang Seng Index jumped by 6.4% month-on-month (m-o-m), after Beijing continue to loosen its pandemic restrictions that have constrained China's economic growth since early 2020. However, the share price rally didn't continue in Taiwan in December 2022; with ongoing geopolitical tensions, higher US interest rates and lower demand for electronic goods (one of Taiwan's biggest exports) weakening investor sentiments. Similarly, share prices in South Korea declined in December 2022 due to weaker export data and cooler demand from China.

The MSCI ASEAN was flattish m-o-m, with Thailand being the best performing market, up by 2% m-o-m, aided by the reopening theme in China as Thailand benefits the most from China tourists. Indonesia, Vietnam, Singapore and Philippines ended the month lower.

While fading reopening tailwinds and rate hikes will weigh on the growth in 2023, outlook is nonetheless anticipated to improve on the back of accelerating recovery at laggard sectors as reopening by China will boost trade, tourism and commodities demand as well as prices. We believe the government is unlikely to implement any negative policy changes relating to subsidies and taxes as it focuses on cost-of-living issues. Overall, we also believe that in focusing on sufficient liquidity to take advantage of market weakness with medium-term investment objectives.

Over in Asia, to recap, after more than 3 years of strict lockdowns which fuelled social and political unrests, China's recent U-turn on its zero-Covid policy took the market by surprise; while its sudden and earlier than expected relaxation on border control was something unforeseen, as most economists expect China to reopen its border soonest between 2nd quarter 2023 and 1st quarter 2024.

We believe China is indeed embracing itself for 'come what may' with the full reopening, and its economy should also start its recovery path, in line with the raft of supportive policy measures announced by the government.

We remain positive on Chinese equities and continue to hold our view that China's fiscal policy is likely to remain accommodative while property policies should be monitored more closely to gauge the onset of recovery for the sector.

However, we also opined that the path to putting China's economy back to its foot will be bumpy as the country may grapple with new Covid-19 wave, putting huge pressure on its healthcare system as it reopens its economy, as well as resiliency of corporates following job/order loss due to previously strict lockdown measures. All in, much is left to be seen in terms of how the China government can tackle its dual challenges of balancing Covid-19 mitigation and supporting economic growth. We think sectors such as tourism, gaming, consumer as well as broad indices names will see share prices trend higher. While property policies have eased in recent months in order to address liquidity pressure in the sector, sentiment is likely to remain soft. Strategy wise, we are overweight in China and Thailand as the latter will benefit most from the return of China tourists.
